Microbiology of the oral mucosa. Oral health is intimately tied to general health and reflects the function and appearance of the oral mucosa. Mucosal surfaces, including the hard and soft tissues of the oral cavity, provide a critical site for the microbial colonization, growth, and infectious process. Dental caries and periodontal disease are caused by complex interactions between various microbial species. The microbial etiology of oral diseases has been well studied. However, scientists know little about the basic biology of the microorganisms involved in disease causation, and research into the human oral cavity as a microbial ecosystem is in its infancy. Several microbial species are implicated in the process of dental caries, but the precise role of each is still unclear. In periodontal disease, the major host-response that triggers microbial destruction of the connective tissue is not defined and is the focus of intensive research. It has been suggested that the commensal microflora has a fundamental role in the suppression of microbial colonization and destruction of periodontal tissues. The colonization or stimulation of specific microorganisms can, however, result in a variety of diseases including pseudomembranous or necrotizing lesions, intraoral abscesses, and pericoronitis. Under certain conditions, infection with such organisms as P. gingivalis can result in systemic disease known as systemic adult periodontitis. P. gingivalis is also implicated in the initiation and progression of atherosclerosis.Q: How do I open a large amount of images in UIScrollView I have created an app which showcases photos in a UIScrollView. The number of photos can be around hundreds and the images can be in portrait or landscape mode. A number of the photos which I am displaying are in landscape and to get the layout to look correct I had to constrain the size of the PhotosUI (a UIView) to the size of the original photo. This means that images which are in portrait get stretched to fill the entire width of the view. To get around this I tried to create another UIView that took up the entire width of the UIScrollView which contained the UIImageViews, this meant that landscape images no longer got stretched. However, the UIView was covering around 70% of the screen and it still had the standard UIWebView if the user touched on the UIWebView. Can anyone recommend a way to get around this?

Minnesota courts state the test as whether there is either a dominant and controlling reason (the reason of the parties "as organizers, promoters, or managers") or a dominant reason (the reason of the parties "as individual members") which led the parties to enter into the partnership. See Davis, 432 N.W.2d at 548, 555; RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS Sec. 772, comment (e), at 251 (1977) 10 A partnership is " 'an association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners of a business for profit.' " Wolf v. Kulpa, 82 Wis.2d 416, 263 N.W.2d 193, 197 (1978) (quoting 1 W. Anderson, Uniform Commercial Code Sec. 2-104:1 (1971)). While we have been unable to find an Illinois case dealing with the real estate aspects of the general partnership, the most recent pronouncement of the Illinois courts indicates that the basic substantive provisions of the Uniform Partnership Act, Ill.Rev.Stat. ch. 106 1/2, paragraphs 30, 31 and 32 (1983), apply to general partnerships. Beard v. Robinson, 33 Ill.App.3d 921, 339 N.E.2d 716, 720 (1975) 11 There is also a difference in the language of the partnership law and the Illinois securities act. The partnership law provides that the "property" of a partner includes his rights in the partnership. Ill.Rev.Stat. ch. 106 1/2, Sec. 23(1) (1983); see also Ill.Rev.Stat. ch. 106 1/2, Sec. 31 (1983) (a partnership is liable for the "acts or defaults of any partner"). The Illinois securities act, in contrast, only refers to the separate property of a partner, not his rights or his interests in the partnership. 740 Ill.Ann.Stat.
