If your activation key does not work, then it is likely the case that the validation code is disabled in the region where you live. The company developed a unique system for verifying the validity of activation codes (an online activation service). If you have the PKI key, then you can always activate the product by copying it to the company URL. If the key is disabled, try another key or try to activate your product directly at the Microsoft site. As for the activation of Microsoft Office 2013 on a PC, is it possible to activate it without the help of a License key? Yes, but only if the current product key was preinstalled, or if it uses a code of a retail version of Office. In the latter case, you can buy a license key from the Microsoft or other retail stores. If you use a retail version of Office, you can buy a license key from the store or the website. If the product is activated, you can install it only from Office Store or at the Microsoft VLSC licensing site. Product keys with a unique identifier allow you to activate the product on the Internet without going to the VLSC website. This unique identifier is also known as a GVLK key, and you can find it on the validation site: <https://pki.microsoft.com> To avoid long registration and activation to the activation sites that contain a large amount of video sites, Microsoft implemented a special feature for users of their graphic software. On the product page, it is possible to download a dedicated activation key without entering your personal details. If the activation code works, then you can activate the program without connecting to the activation server. 5ec8ef588b
